In the July 1983 issue of Ebony Magazine, Robert J. Nash, the Commission's Vice Chairman, is featured as one of nine black architects in the United States who have helped shape urban America. Entitled "Black Architects: Shapers of Urban America", the magazine article features each of the architects associated with a photograph of one of his architectural achievements. As one of the designers of the Cancer Research Center in Washington, Mr. Nash is photographed in front of the facility. The article focuses not only upon achievements but also on the problems of survival for a black architectural firm in the United States.

Copies of the magazine may be purchased at area newstands or by contacting the Washington Office of Ebony Magazine (393-5860).
